Overview

It is the law in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania that all physicians and other persons authorized to diagnose or treat disorders and disabilities must report to PennDOT any patient 15 years of age or older who has been diagnosed as having a condition that could impair his or her ability to safely operate a motor vehicle. To improve highway safety for everyone, medical reporting assists PennDOT in determining whether those individuals who are applying for a driver's license or those individuals already possessing a driver's license are medically qualified to safely operate a motor vehicle. Without the cooperation of these medical providers, thousands of medically impaired drivers would remain undetected by PennDOT. The public has a right to protection from death, injury or property loss caused by drivers with medical conditions that limit their ability to drive safely. Medical reporting plays a vital role in providing this protection.

What is the purpose of medical reporting?

Medical reporting assists PennDOT in determining whether those individuals applying for a driver's license or those individuals already possessing a driver's license are medically qualified to safely operate a motor vehicle. By law, it is a health care personnel's duty to report when a patient is at risk of not being able to safely drive due to a medical condition.

How effective is medical reporting?

Medical reporting is a very effective mechanism for identifying medically impaired drivers. Approximately 27,000 new reports are submitted each year to PennDOT. Overall, approximately 22 percent of these individuals have medical impairments significant enough to merit recall of their driving privilege. An additional 21 percent of reports result in restrictions placed on the individual's driving privilege. These reports also cross the age spectrum - half involve drivers under 65 years of age.

What occurs when a report is made?

The receipt of a report triggers an evaluation process. This evaluation process is performed by PennDOT's Medical Unit. Based on the information submitted, restrictions to the person's driving privilege may be added or deleted; the person's license may be recalled or restored; the person may be asked to provide more specific medical information or to complete a driver's examination; or, no action may be taken. Although PennDOT may request further information from health care personnel, it is PennDOT, not the health care personnel, that determines if a license should be recalled or restored. The state has the option of placing restrictions on driving (i.e. no night driving) and the patient may also be asked to have an additional medical evaluation or driver's test.

Are there other options?

No other options are as effective as medical reporting. Some states have statutory requirements for self-reporting, but research indicates an extremely high rate of noncompliance.

Given the enormous social and economic pressure to drive, the impaired driver has a vested interest in not reporting conditions that impair the ability to drive safely when it will result in the recall of the driving privilege. In addition, the driver is not the most objective judge of his or her own level of impairment.

Are these reports confidential?

Reports submitted to PennDOT are confidential and used solely to determine the qualification of an individual to drive a motor vehicle. PennDOT is compelled by law to honor this provision and will not release information regarding the source or content of the report, even when the inquiry is from the patient.

How do these reports affect patient/health care personnel confidentiality?

There are many circumstances under which the obligation to maintain patient confidentiality must give way to a duty to protect other persons from harm (e.g., reporting gunshot wounds, child abuse, venereal disease, etc.).

The current statement of ethics of the American Medical Association contains the following provision:

“A physician may not reveal the confidences entrusted to him in the course of medical attendance, or the deficiencies he may observe in the character of patients, unless he is required to do so by law or unless it becomes necessary in order to protect the welfare of the individual or of the community.”

Pennsylvania's Medical Reporting Program is clearly consistent with this statement.

What is my liability if I do or do not report?

If you DO report, you are exempt from any civil or criminal liability. No action may be brought against any person or agency for providing the required information; however, if you DO NOT report, there is a possibility that you could be held responsible as a proximate cause of an accident resulting in death, injury or property loss caused by your patient. Also, providers who do not comply with their legal requirement to report may be convicted of a summary criminal offense.

Are there established medical criteria?

PennDOT has a Medical Advisory Board (MAB) responsible for the formulation of physical and mental criteria, including vision standards, for the licensing of drivers. The MAB consists of a neurologist, a cardiologist, an internist, a general practitioner, an ophthalmologist, a psychiatrist, an orthopedic surgeon, an optometrist, and members from PennDOT, Department of Justice, Department of Health, and the Pennsylvania State Police. The formulation of these regulations is open for public review and comment through the Commonwealth's Regulatory Review process and can also be found online at www.pacode.com.

How do I submit reports to PennDOT?

All physicians, chiropractors, physician assistants, certified registered nurse practitioners and other persons authorized to diagnose or treat disorders and disabilities shall report within 10 days, in writing, the full name, address and date of birth of every person diagnosed as having a condition that could impair his/her ability to drive a motor vehicle safely. It is helpful to PennDOT in making a licensing determination if you include the conditions and any specific information about the condition. The report may be made in writing a letter or by using PennDOT's condition specific medical form(s) or the Initial Reporting Form (DL-13).

Historically, medical reporting has provided a highly effective mechanism for removing impaired drivers from our roads. Without the cooperation of providers, thousands of impaired drivers would remain undetected by PennDOT. If you have online access to the condition specific medical forms, you may use the applicable form(s) as an initial report. If you do not currently have online access to the medical forms, but are interested in obtaining access, visit the Medical Reporting Information Center on PennDOT's Driver and Vehicle Services website, www.dmv.state.pa.us, to register.
